

Obsessive Ex's Cyberstalking Gets Man Fired, Arrested

Oct 17, 2014, 4:31 PM ET

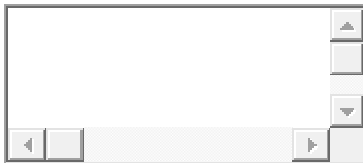

By MOLLIE RIEGGER and ALEXA VALIENTE via 20/20

Tawny Blazejowki stalked and harrassed Joe Good and over a dozen others after their break-up

Courtesy of Joe Good

Share

Copy

A St. Augustine, Florida, man is at ease now that his scorned ex-lover is behind bars.

“I finally can breathe again,” Joe Good, 51, said in an exclusive interview with ABC News’ “20/20.” “Now I don’t feel like every time I see a police car that, ‘Oh, they’re coming for me.’”

Good's former girlfriend of three years, Tawny Blazejowski, 41, of St. Augustine would stop at nothing to ruin his life after the two broke up. Her web of lies eventually turned Good's life into a really bad nightmare.

She succeeded in getting him arrested three times and fired from his job at an insurance company, where he had worked for over 24 years. Blazejowski didn't stop there. She targeted several others in Good's life: colleagues, neighbors and even his new girlfriend's landlord.

Blazejowski was sentenced to nine years in prison last Friday for three counts of threats for extortion, four counts of aggravated stalking and one count of false report of abuse, child neglect or abandonment of 16 people from Florida to Chicago to California.

Life wasn't always bad. Good recalls many times with Blazejowski and their combined six children, all from previous marriages. He says he saw a future with her.

"She was awesome," Good said. "I mean, I've gone on a cruise with her and had a great time. We went to Puerto Rico, had a great time."

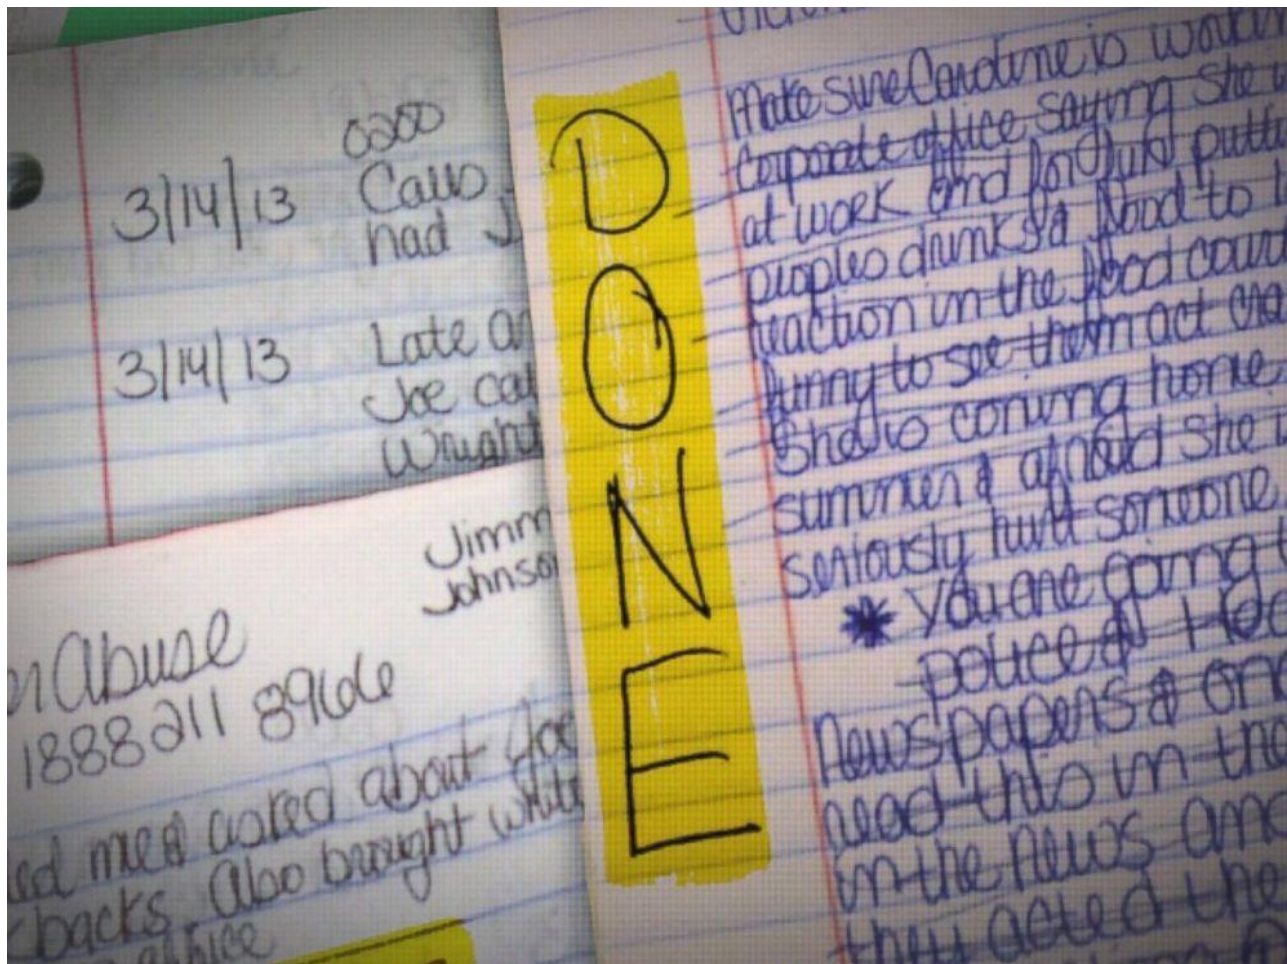

But Good said there were red flags that something might have been off with Blazejowski. He said she would get upset a lot.

"The timeframe between when she'd get mad got shorter and shorter. It escalated until finally she asked me, 'Do you want me to just go ahead and cancel the vacation I've got planned for you?' and I said, 'Yeah, sure, I'm tired of this,'" Good recalled. "Immediately, the phone rang and she [said], 'Are you sure this is what you want? Because I got everything lined up that I'm going to ruin you.'"

Less than an hour later, Good said he received a text message notifying him that his email password had been changed.

Blazejowski hacked Good's personal email account and sent a pornographic photo of Good to his employer, but it was only the beginning of Blazejowski's wrath.

Police arrested Good on the night of Oct. 19, 2012, he said. Blazejowski had gone to the sheriff's office with a bloody face, accusing Good of domestic violence.

ABC News

PHOTO: Tawny Blazejowski documented all of her crimes in notebooks.

"I ended up going to jail that night, because here's the thing: The girl says a guy hit her. Most people think, 'Wow, the guy hit her.' They don't think the girl's lying," Good said.

Blazejowski then called the Florida Abuse Hotline, accusing Good and his teenage son of operating a child pornography ring. Good said it wasn't true, but investigators didn't believe him.

"It was total harassment," Good said. "I did everything I could to stay away from her. She was one step ahead of me the whole time."

No longer satisfied with ruining Good's life, Blazejowski began attacking people she didn't even know.

“She did a Crimestoppers tip to me, accusing me of allegations against my kids,” Jenny Robor, Good’s former colleague at the insurance company, told “20/20.” “The things that are on there I can’t even repeat. They’re so horrible.”

Blazejowski anonymously told Crimestoppers that Robor would deliver her young children to Good’s sex ring, none of which was true. Blazesjowski even threatened Doug Duggan, the landlord to Good's new girlfriend. Duggan received anonymous letters through the U.S. Postal Service.

“It was a big block letter, and it said, ‘If your tenant, Mariela Murphy, is not out of that house within 30 days, I’ll burn down that house and your house,’ and gave the addresses of both of them,” Duggan told “20/20.” “[The houses] were really my entire net worth.”

Page

- 1